

Do as I Say and Not as I Do (Paperback)

By Mark Lamb

Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The seven stories in this collected volume of short fiction, Do As I Say and Not As I Do, reflect author Mark Lamb's experiences as a parent. The trials and tribulations of being responsible for children impacts all parents deeply, and Lamb has let his formidable imagination run with this theme. The verities of human commitment and development go to some strange, beautiful, and disturbing places in these stories. Lamb's narrative voice is distinct, simultaneously detached and vaguely sympathetic, non-judgmental, but not quite comforting. He has arrived at this, his first volume, with an identifiable style. What irony that is found here is flat, then twisted through a kaleidoscope, making it invisible or merely suggested. There is a Southern Gothic seasoning, somewhere in the tonal and topical region where Poe's less macabre vignettes and Capote's Music for Chameleons might intermix. But his characters are all too real: Lamb shows us the good, the bad, the ugly, and the perverse, and doesn't flinch from representing the messy, at times grotesque, shortcomings of people as they really live. The settings...
